Court of Protection

The Court of Protection decides whether someone has the mental capacity to make a particular decision for themselves.

A lack of mental capacity could be due to:

- A Stroke or Brain Injury - A Learning Disability -
- Dementia - A Mental Health Problem - Substance Misuse -
- Confusion, Drowsiness or Unconsciousness because of an Illness or the Treatment for it -

We offer specialised legal advice on:

- Deputyship application for individuals lacking capacity -
- Trustee application for the sale of property -
- Applications to revoke a Lasting Power of Attorney -
- Enduring Power of Attorney and Lasting Power of Attorney Disputes -
